

Species composition vs. size-structured community: environmental drivers

A: manyglm negative binomial coefficients (per 1 SD); no predictor significantly affects species composition (n = 11 sites, 999 bootstraps).
B: PERMANOVA R² for species-only (grey) vs. species × size-class (blue) matrices. Daily temperature range explains 4× more variation when size classes are included, revealing that environmental gradients act primarily through size structure.